Chinese New Year

Chinese New Year is also known as Spring Festival and is an important traditional holiday in China. The festival is traditionally the longest in China as it runs from Chinese New Year's Eve to the Lantern festival on the 15th day. The Chinese calendar is based on the moon and the sun and the Chinese New Year is often referred to as the Lunar New Year.

The festival is a time to honour deities as well as ancestors. Within China there is a wide variety of regional customs and traditions when celebrating the Chinese New Year. Often, on the evening before, families get together for the annual reunion dinner.

Often, flower decorations are displayed, firecrackers are lit and money is given in red paper envelopes.

Traditionally, every family cleans their house to sweep away any bad fortune and make way for good luck. Windows and doors are decorated with red paper cut-outs and poetry about:

- good fortune
- happiness
- wealth
- longevity

Check that lines do not extend into the margin area and do not overlap the text

Make sure the correct shape has been inserted and has been filled with a red colour. Check it does not overlap any text

Make sure the envelopes image is in the second column and has been resized using a corner handle to keep it in proportion. Check that it does not overlap any text or extend into the space between the columns
